RUMOR COLUMN

THE SIXTH MEMBER?

While the five figures above dominate Gotham's visible power structure, whispers are circulating through technology circles regarding a possible sixth member of this emerging alliance.

Sources inside Stark Industries suggest that Tony Stark may be developing a new artificial intelligence system.

Engineers close to the project claim the technology could represent the next stage of automated infrastructure—a machine intelligence capable of coordinating logistics, digital systems, and city-wide technology networks during times of crisis.

But what exactly Stark is building remains unclear.

The rumored project name:

— ULTRON —

Very little information has surfaced regarding the mysterious system, but analysts speculate that if such a machine were ever deployed at scale, it could potentially oversee massive technological networks across Gotham City.

Whether the project is intended as a defensive safeguard...

or something far more ambitious … remains unknown.

For now, Stark Industries has declined to comment on the rumor.

But if the whispers prove true, the appearance of a sixth power in Gotham's already complex network of influence could change the balance of the city entirely.

Stay tuned for more developments as the City Herald continues its investigation.
